

Is Royal bath time for George a family affair? William changes nappies and the Queen tucks him into bed (imagines Alison Jackson)

Artist uses lookalikes of royals to create intimate and amusing scenes
She imagines Prince William changing nappies and the Queen taking pictures on her mobile

By LUCY WATERLOW FOR MAILONLINE
PUBLISHED: 13:14, 21 October 2013 | UPDATED: 20:42, 21 October 2013

It's a big week for baby Prince George of Cambridge as the world will be watching on Wednesday as he's christened. But from the look of these pictures, he's already getting used to posing for the cameras with his mother and father, Kate and Prince William.

The images show him scrubbing up in a bubble bath with his parents, being fed by his father and being snapped on a mobile phone by his great-grandmother, the Queen, before she helps tuck him into bed.

But look closely and you'll see this isn't a rare insight into the life of the royal new parents. It's the work of artist Alison Jackson, who is renowned for her elaborate 'spooof' productions which give an imaginary and amusing behind-the-scenes look into the world of celebrities and royals.

Bath time: Kate blows bubbles to entertain baby Prince George in this picture imagined by Alison Jackson

Daddy's co-pilot: Prince William's choice of bath toy for his son is obviously a helicopter

Saving water: This version of the royal couple are conscious of the rising cost of living

Scrubbed up: The Prince George lookalike after his bath

Cuddle with great-granny: After his wash he's ready to meet the Queen

One is not amused: But like most babies, he doesn't stay clean for long!

Reflecting reality: Jackson gives an insight into Prince George's life, baby sick and all

A far cry from the official family portrait: Jackson gets her scantily clad Duchess and shirtless Duke to pose on a bed with their baby

Bonding: Jackson portrays the Duke and Duchess getting some skin-on-skin contact with their newborn

Duchess gets her hands dirty: Glamorous Kate changes a nappy

Hands on father: But Jackson imagines Prince William pulls his weight with the nappy changes too

Daddy daycare: But it's not just nappy changing Jackson thinks the Duke can do, she also imagines he helps out with feeds

Milk monster: Growing babies are hungry but Daddy is prepared

Taste tester: Jackson envisions the prince sampling the milk before Kate feeds her baby boy

Trying on a crown for size: The real Prince George will one day wear one as third in line to the throne

Happy family: The couple cuddle up on the sofa as George has another feed and Prince William holds the baby, right

Learning curve: Jackson suggests the royal parents get some tips from Mother and Baby magazine

Great-granny knows best: The Queen is always on hand to give some parenting advice

Tickle you under there! The lookalikes get their little prince to smile

Will he take after grandad? The couple fool about with false ears as they teach the baby to recognise Prince Charles and Uncle Harry's faces

Step aside Michael! Jackson thinks the Queen could snap a great family portrait

This will be one's screensaver: Jackson sees Her Majesty taking family photos on her mobile

Time for bed: The Queen helps tuck in her great-grandson after Jackson imagined the parents getting the nursery ready when Kate was pregnant, right

Once upon a time, there was a prince: The Queen could read George a bedtime story

For more details on Alison Jackson and her work, visit www.alisonjackson.com, twitter.com/alisonjackson and www.facebook.com/AlisonJacksonOnline