

M News Weird News

Prince William and Kate Middleton lookalikes give Jersey spuds their royal seal of approval during trip to Morrisons

The 'royal couple' were spotted in their local supermarket stocking up on their favourite new potatoes

SHARE

By Laura Connor
10:05, 6 APR 2015 | UPDATED 11:34, 6 APR 2015

NEWS

Juggling act: 'Wills' shows his pregnant wife his best party trick (Image: Rex Features)

They might be royalty but Wills and Kate show they're still just like any other family as they do their weekly shop in the local supermarket.

A heavily pregnant Kate larks around around with Prince William as they sample the first batches of spring-time spud Jersey Royals in Morrisons.

Jersey Royals: The 'royal pair' enjoy a shopping trip in Morrisons (Image: Rex Features)

At least, this is what it might look like if the pair ventured down to their local store.

But take a closer look and all is not what it seems - these Royals are lookalikes.

The pictures were taken by artist Alison Jackson who is renowned for her spoof reproductions of palace and celebrity life.

The photos have been taken after a warmer than usual winter has resulted in an early harvest of Jersey Royals arriving in supermarkets ahead of season.

Bumper crop: There has been an early harvest of the popular potatoes (Image: Rex Features)

And Prince William certainly seems to have found more than one use for the humble potato, as he thrills a smiling Kate with his juggling tricks in the veg aisle.

He's certainly given them his royal seal of approval.

Meanwhile, there is still speculation over whether the Duchess of Cambridge will have a little boy or girl when she is due to give birth, supposedly this month.

The arrival of some traditionally feminine paint samples at the Royal couple's home has lent further weight to rumours that a little girl is on the way.