Ed Miliband was very clear when he faced a BBC Question Time audience last week: there will be no deal with the Scottish National party. Cross his heart and hope to be prime minister. So here is photographer Alison Jackson's vision, using lookalikes, of how that complete lack of a deal might work. We first see the Labour leader entering No 10. By an astonishing coincidence, Nicola Sturgeon happens to be in the neighbourhood. They greet the crowds and Ed later teaches Nicola to curtsy - just in case she happens to be visiting the palace at the same time as Ed.

Remember that promise, though: absolutely no deal.
